CORPORATE SPONSORSHIP OPPORTUNITIES
We Imagine a World Without Pulmonary Fibrosis

The Pulmonary Fibrosis Foundation mobilizes people and resources to provide access to high quality care and leads research for a cure so people with pulmonary fibrosis will live longer, healthier lives.

PF patients are STRONG
Your support makes them STRONGER
The Pulmonary Fibrosis Foundation (PFF) is the only organization exclusively focused on research, education and advocacy efforts for the pulmonary fibrosis (PF) and idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis (IPF) community in the United States.

Since our inception 20 years ago, we have awarded more than $4.5 million in research grants, which have been leveraged into more than $100 million in subsequent funding from the publicly supported National Institutes of Health. We are dedicated to accelerating treatments and providing patients with a platform to make a significant impact on future generations.

To further stimulate groundbreaking therapeutic advancements and lead to quicker research outcomes, we created the Pulmonary Fibrosis Patient Registry, which collects a broad array of anonymized patient information, and makes it possible for researchers to explore the causes and treatment of pulmonary fibrosis. To date, the value of research using Registry data exceeds $31 million.
Pulmonary fibrosis is a family of more than 200 different lung diseases that all look very much alike and fall into a larger group of disease called “interstitial lung diseases.” The word “pulmonary” means “lung” and “fibrosis” means scar tissue. So in its simplest sense, pulmonary fibrosis means scarring in the lungs. It’s a progressive disease that does not have a “standard” or expected clinical course. With no known cure, certain forms of PF, such as idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis, may take the lives of patients within three to five years from diagnosis.

As the leading patient advocacy organization, we are taking charge in the search for a cure for this devastating disease. We strive toward a cure because:

- 200,000 people are living with IPF in the United States.

- Shortness of breath, fatigue, and chronic cough, the most commonly reported disease symptoms, have a severe impact on the quality of patient’s lives and can prevent them from everyday activities.

- One in 200 people over the age of 70 are living with IPF and 50,000 new cases are diagnosed annually in the United States.

- 55% of patients experience at least one misdiagnosis, most often of asthma, pneumonia, and bronchitis, and 38% of patients experience two or more misdiagnoses which leads to additional time spent before they receive effective, specialized treatments.

- Every patient should have access to a center with expertise in diagnosing and treating pulmonary fibrosis. Today, 84% of patients in the 374 metropolitan statistical areas in America live within two hours of a site in our PFF Care Center Network.

- The only known “cure” is a lung transplant. In 2017, there were 2,450 reported lung transplants done in the United States, nearly half of them were for pulmonary fibrosis patients.

Pulmonary Fibrosis Awareness Month takes place each September to unite those who have been impacted by pulmonary fibrosis across the globe.

This initiative relies heavily on social media participation to spread the word about pulmonary fibrosis all over the world. One of the first steps you can take to participate is to follow and interact with us on our social media channels at @pfforg.

PF Awareness Month sponsorships start at $2,500 and provide the opportunity to gain exposure with patients, caregivers and healthcare professionals through a robust social media and digital campaign. In 2019, the PF community united and raised awareness to more than 1.7 million people online. This was accomplished through participation in various awareness month activities, including 30 Facts In 30 Days, Portraits of PF, #BlueUp4PF, raising funds, attending or hosting an awareness event, personalizing social media profiles, and more.
