A pulmonary fibrosis support group is:

- A place to talk openly about the challenges of living with pulmonary fibrosis in a comfortable and safe environment
- A place to exchange ideas, compare experiences, and learn from others
- A source of current and accurate information about pulmonary fibrosis
- A place where mutual emotional support and empowerment is offered.
- A place where people can develop relationships and friendships with others who have experienced similar situations
- A place where individuals can find reassurance in the realization that they are not alone with their disease where privacy and confidentiality are respected

This Group is committed to providing emotional and social support for pulmonary fibrosis patients and their families
